RE: Vacation of a Portion of the Shady Forest Plat Justification

Dear Mr. ~~Mr.~~ ^{ERIK} Bredfeldt,

On behalf of our client, Causseaux, Hewett, & Walpole, Inc. (CHW) submits this application to vacate a portion of a plat in accordance with the City of Gainesville Land Development Code (LDC) Sec. 30-192 and Chapter 177.101, Florida Statutes. Consistent with these requirements, this application package includes proof of ownership for the property covered by the plat sought to be vacated, proof that all taxes have been paid, a boundary survey for the portion of the Shady Forest plat sought to be vacated, and aerial maps to demonstrate that the vacation will not affect right of convenient access of persons owning other parts of the subdivision.

The purpose of this process is to return lots and unrecorded streets, which were never built, back to raw acreage so that a dedication of right-of-way can be completed for the creation of streets and properties consistent with the underlying land use and zoning classification, as well as the Urban Village design guidelines. A site plan application for the property will be filed at a later date in accordance with the City's process outlined in the LDC.

The subject area for the plat vacation is shown on the boundary survey and aerial maps included as part of this application package. All existing structures within the vacation area will be removed. As you can see on the attached aerial maps, the existing lots to the south will still have access via SW 38th Terrace and SW 17th Place. Therefore, the proposed vacation of a portion of a plat will not negatively affect the right of convenient access for these lots.

In order to assist the City's Planning and Development Services staff and to streamline the review process, CHW provided written notice of these intentions to the City's Public Works Department, Gainesville Regional Utilities (GRU), and Gainesville Fire Rescue Department prior to submittal of this application. Also, a First Step meeting was held with City staff on December 18, 2012, and a neighborhood workshop was held on December 20, 2012. As required by City staff, a completed Development Review Board (DRB) application is submitted as part of this application. CHW has also initiated discussions with the County Attorney's office to coordinate the item being received by the Alachua County Board of County Commissioners in early 2013.

CHW requests that this item be placed on the February 14, 2013 DRB agenda and the following February 28, 2013 City Commission agenda. It is very important that we strictly adhere to this time-sensitive schedule. Please contact me directly should you have any questions or need any additional information.

Sincerely,
Causseaux, Hewett, & Walpole, Inc.

DCF worker testifies in trial of woman accused of killing foster child

The Associated Press

MIAMI — A veteran state child welfare worker testified Wednesday that she was dumbfounded to learn in spring 2002 that foster child Rilya Wilson had been missing for more than a year and no records seemed to exist to explain her whereabouts.

Dora Betancourt, a 35-year employee of the Department of Children and Families, said she couldn't understand why the girl's caretaker, GERALYN GRAHAM, was claiming that an unknown DCF worker had taken her in January 2001 for a mental evaluation and never returned her.

"I was in disbelief," Betancourt testified. "It didn't make sense at all."

Graham, 66, is on trial for murder in Rilya's disappearance. Prosecutors say Graham smothered Rilya with a pillow and buried her near a lake or canal. Graham insists she did not harm the child, whose body has never been found. The trial is expected to continue for several weeks. Graham faces life in prison if convicted.

Betancourt said she found a number of inconsistencies as she investigated the case. Graham said she was Rilya's paternal grandmother, but state documents said the girl was in the custody of a non-relative — Graham's companion, Pamela Graham. GERALYN GRAHAM also told Betancourt the two were sisters, which is not true.

There appeared to be no record of required monthly DCF case-worker visits from January 2001 until April 2002, when Betancourt began preparing papers for the Grahams to adopt Rilya and a younger sibling. It also appeared that Graham had been receiving welfare checks as if Rilya were living at her home for all those months she was missing.

Betancourt said she went to visit Rilya and was met by Graham in the driveway of her home. There was no sign of Rilya.

"Where's Rilya?" Betancourt testified that she asked Graham. "She said, 'I thought you were bringing her.' I said, 'What do you mean?'"

Graham went on to explain, according to Betancourt, that the mental evaluation had been ordered because Rilya was having severe psychological problems, including urinating and defecating all around the house.

Betancourt said she searched through records at various DCF units for any trace of Rilya and found nothing. She checked county schools rolls, Medicaid records, anything that might provide a clue. But it seemed as though the girl had simply been lost.

"I was upset. I was still in shock that this was happening," she said.

SHOOTING: Victim was arrested 5 times between '00 and now

Redd was shot in the yard of his double-wide home while members of his family were inside his house. According to sheriff's Lt. Todd Kelly, Redd banged on the door of his home yelling, "I've been shot." He died a short time later, deputies say.

Officers quickly put up police tape and blocked off the scene of the shooting. Redd's home is at the end of a dirt road, and there's a separate path on the back of the house that police say the family used.

Neighbors said most of the houses in the area occupied by other members of Redd's family, but they did not comment on the shooting. Some were put out of their houses until police canvassed and searched residences.

Repeated attempts by The Sun to contact the family have been unsuccessful.

Forgey said the workload for collecting evidence and solving leads is assigned to different detectives.

"A lot of times one lead may not pan out, and another one might, and then you take off after that one," he said. "We are confident we will solve this. Unfortunately, it takes time."

Because there are so many pieces to the puzzle, Forgey said, officers meet twice a day — in the morning and the afternoon — to discuss findings. There were plenty of leads still coming in even up to Wednesday afternoon, Forgey said.

Redd leaves behind a wife, Katrina Singleton-Redd, and four children: Chelsea, Constance, Jamilah and Kiyahni.

"One (detective) may be working on forensic evidence," Forgey said, "and one could be interviewing potential witnesses."

According to court records, Redd was arrested five times between 2000 and his death.

In April 2005, he was arrested on charges of aggravated assault. In '08, he was charged with battery and marijuana possession. In September 2010, he was charged with marijuana possession, and in December of that year he was arrested for failing to appear on the charge.

On March 31, 2011, he turned himself in to the Alachua County jail on a warrant for cocaine trafficking. His bond was $10,000, and he spent about five hours in jail.

Forgey said despite Redd's history, the Sheriff's Office does not get "tunnel vision" and only look at that aspect for the investigation.

"We obviously look at everything, and that being one aspect of it, that could be involved," Forgey said, "but we obviously don't want to focus on that alone."

Redd leaves behind a wife, Katrina Singleton-Redd, and four children: Chelsea, Constance, Jamilah and Kiyahni.

FAC: Will push for reform of state's Medicaid billing system

The Medicaid billing system could cost counties about $300 million annually, FAC Communications Director Cragin Mosteller said. The organization supports dissolving the system in a way that would eliminate any county-level financial responsibilities and related administrative burdens for Florida's Medicaid services, but would also support retaining the current process if it is revised, according to its 2013 legislative program.

Suggested revisions include allowing counties to review their bills before paying them.

Alachua County Commissioner Susan Baird agreed the state should develop a system that, at minimum, ensures that counties' Medicaid bills are accurate.

FAC was helpful when counties were disputing the Medicaid bills they received from the state, Acting County Manager Richard Drummond said. Alachua County staff collaborated with FAC to determine the accuracy of its estimated Medicaid bill. He remembered FAC organizing huge conference calls that included representatives from virtually every Florida county to assess concerns about inaccurate billing estimates.

"They work really hard to represent all the counties," Drummond said of the FAC. "We didn't have to worry about pitting one county against the other."

Baird said FAC is useful in resolving technical issues like the Medicaid billing controversy, but she said Alachua County officials should evaluate its views and speak up if FAC's views don't align with local needs.

FAC also singled out the juvenile detention billing system as another in need of revision. It supports shifting the full responsibility for funding and operating juvenile detention facilities to the state as well as a few revisions to the current system, according to its legislative program.

Bills from the Florida Department of Juvenile Justice cost counties between $70 million and $100 million per year, Mosteller said.

FAC's third priority aims to ensure amendments to the Communications Services Tax, which provides revenue for both the state and its counties, do not diminish the tax as a revenue source for local governments. The tax, which applies to communications services such as direct-to-home satellite and telecommunications outlets, needs to be updated in a revenue-neutral way that doesn't hurt their already diminished budgets, she said.

Although its legislative priorities may change from year to year, Mosteller maintained the organization's mission to preserve and protect home rule remains its central focus.

"We want your county commissioners to have the ability to make changes and have an impact on the local level," she said.

Drummond said Alachua County is rarely in total alignment with FAC's goals because different counties have differing priorities. However, FAC always considers its input.

"We certainly have a voice," he said.

Marino was held in criminal contempt for failing to remove the information and ordered to pay more than $6,281 in his legal fees.

In May, a half-dozen University of Florida employees said they had been harassed or threatened as a result of their home addresses and other contact information being posted on the animal-rights website, according to UF officials, who said at the time they hope that changes to the state's stalking law will help address these kind of threats.

Marino founded Negotiation is Over and has used its website in a campaign against researchers who she claims experiment on animals.

prosecutor, King also had served with Blair as a Marion deputy in the 1970s.

In an interview after Kuhn exited the race, King said he had found some investigations spearheaded by Blair, the former head of the Sheriff's Office's major crimes unit, were "disconcerting" because he believed Blair's team had withheld some information.

It doesn't appear FDLE will conclude its inquiry into Blair's alleged campaign finance violations before the window Bailey requested closes. It's unclear how that affects the investigation.

Blair is scheduled to take the helm in about a month. He is now attending an orientation seminar for newly elected sheriffs in Tallahassee.

Blair came to FDLE's attention after an anonymous tipster called Crime

Stoppers of Marion County on Nov. 1.

King's office had looked into Blair's finances previously.

On one occasion Kuhn's supporters had charged that Blair had broken the law by passing bad checks and accepting contributions that exceeded the lawful $500 limit for individuals.

Prosecutors reviewed those reports and subpoenaed Blair's campaign bank records. It turned out that two bad checks had been written to Blair's campaign and not by Blair, thus making him the victim.

As for the allegation that some of Blair's contributors exceeded the maximum donation, King's staff concluded those were inadvertent.

Yet there was another allegation during the campaign that Blair was accepting contributions from outside sources and declaring them in his campaign records as his own funds, loaned from his personal account.

Prosecutors reviewed that and could not substantiate with concrete details or iron-clad witnesses that any money laundering was occurring.

Then came the tip from Crime Stoppers.

King's staff, FDLE officials and Sheriff Dean have declined to discuss the basis of that allegation. Dean, however, has said the charge was detailed and credible enough to prompt him to ask FDLE to review it.

Cervone said he knew little about the case because he has yet to meet with FDLE investigators to learn about its progress. He also said that Scott's hand-off does not mean the state is moving closer to prosecuting anyone.

Swapping out prosecutors in probes that might contain conflicts happens fairly regularly, he said.
