Re: Abandoned Shopping Carts

Section 506.5131, Florida Statutes, restricts a municipality's ability to apply fines, fees, or other costs to a retailer for shopping carts abandoned on public property including right of ways. However, many municipalities have enacted ordinances that seek to reduce the number of abandoned shopping carts.

Physical Restraints

Ordinances that require retailers to have a system to physically prevent the removal of shopping carts from the property of the business have been implemented in many communities. Generally, the type of barrier that may be used is prescribed in the ordinance.

Common options include:

- Systems that cause the cart wheels to lock near property boundary
- Bars on carts that prevent them from leaving the store
- Refundable deposits on the carts
- Physical barriers that prevent cart from leaving front sidewalk

These ordinances do not always apply to all retail establishments. Some communities have only applied regulation to larger retail locations which are often described as big box stores. Other communities have exempted retail locations based on the number of carts the retailer owns.

Retrieval Plans

As part of physical restraint ordinances or separately, Florida communities have enacted ordinances requiring retail establishments to submit plans for retrieving the store's carts. The plan must be approved by the municipality.

There are ordinances that have fines for not following or submitting the plans. They also address when the City will pick up carts and a disposition policy.

Common requirements of these plans include:

- Establishing a notification system that allows the municipality to alert the retailer of abandoned carts
- The frequency in which the retail establishment must go out in the community to get carts
- Areas that will be monitored

Some larger retail and grocery locations in the City of Gainesville have already implemented physical restraints for shopping carts. There are no discernible retrieval operations occurring in the City.

The predominant owners of abandoned carts collected by Public Works are Wal-Mart, dollar stores, and grocery stores.
